

Workshop 'New law, New villages? Changing rural Indonesia'

Leiden, 19-20 May 2016

(<http://www.kitlv.nl/workshop-new-law-new-villages-changing-rural-indonesia/>)

Authors biographies

Agung Wardana is a PhD candidate at the Asia Research Centre, Murdoch University, conducting research on the politics of spatial and environmental governance in the post-authoritarian Bali. He recently holds a teaching position at the Faculty of Law, Universitas Gadjah Mada. His articles have been published in, among others, the Asian Journal of Comparative Law, the Asia Pacific Journal of Anthropology, and Indonesia Law Review.

Aksel Tømte works on programme activities in Indonesia and Norway related to Business and human rights (with a particular focus on palm oil and transmigration) and economic, social and cultural rights. Tømte has previously worked for Peace Brigades International's Indonesia Project, and for the Norwegian Embassy in Jakarta. He started working at NCHR's Indonesia Programme in 2008. <http://www.jus.uio.no/smr/english/people/adm/akset/>

Bambang Soetono. Graduated from Faculty of Law, UGM on Constitutional Law, Legislative Drafting at Faculty of Law, UI and ANU, School of Law on Public International Law. Used to work as Lecturer at Faculty of Law, UII Yogyakarta & ALTRI-Jakarta, Legal Analyst/Legislative Drafter at State Secretariat/Cabinet Secretariat and recently Social Development Specialist-WBOJ.

Budi Setiyono University of Indonesia, Undergraduate in Anthropology, 1988; University of Indonesia, MA in Anthropology, 2008; Gadjah Mada University, PhD in Anthropology 2015; Senior Lecturer for at Indonesian Institute of Arts (ISI) of Surakarta, Solo, Indonesia, 1992-until now.

Carol Warren is Associate Professor and Fellow of the Asia Research Centre, Murdoch University. She has conducted research on customary law, community development and environmental politics in Malaysia and Indonesia. Her publications include Adat and Dinas: Balinese Communities in the Indonesian State (1993), Community, Environment and Local Governance in Indonesia: Locating the Commonwealth, edited with John McCarthy (2009), and Land for the People: The State and Agrarian Conflict in Indonesia, edited with Anton Lucas (2013).

Darmanto Simaepa is a PhD student at Cultural Anthropology and Sociology Development, Leiden University. His research interests include land tenure, nature conservation, food security and agrarian transition among indigenous people of Southeast Asia. He obtained master degree from Asian Studies department, Murdoch University with a research paper on the dynamic of customary land relations among Mentawai, the indigenous people of Siberut Island. His major publication has been Berebut Hutan Siberut: Orang Mentawai, Kekuasaan dan Politik Ekologi (2012).

Deddy Winarwan completed his Masters level studies in Public Administration at the Gadjah Mada University (2004), and Doctor of Public Administration (Cumlaude predicate) with a specialization in Public Policy at the Gadjah Mada University (2012). He worked as a Civil Servant on duty at the Ministry of Home Affairs of the Republic of Indonesia, but he is also active in teaching as an adjunct lecturer at the University of Bandar Lampung, the University of Tulang Bawang and the University of Megow Pak.

Gema Satria Mayang Sedyadi (Gema) Gema is a researcher at The SMERU Research Institute. He holds a master's degree and an undergraduate degree in urban and regional planning from the Bandung Institute of Technology. Prior to joining SMERU, Gema worked as a rural development evaluation specialist at the Directorate of Urban and Rural Affairs of Bappenas.

Irfani Darma obtained a master degree from the University of Indonesia in social policy studies. He has long term experience as international-development practitioner in the field of local governance, community development, and CSO strengthening programs. Recently he has been engaged with supporting the implementation of the Village Law - working in partnership with central and local governments and with CSOs. Recently he conducted a study and wrote a report for ADB relevant for the implementation of the Village Law - <http://www.adb.org/publications/toward-mainstreaming-and-sustaining-cdd-indonesia>

Jacqueline Vel is the initiator of this workshop. She is senior researcher at KITLV and the VVI (Leiden Law School). Her current research concentrates on village governance in Indonesia, as a continuation of research on rural development, access to justice and local politics in Indonesia. She is the author of Uma politics; an ethnography of democratization in West Sumba, Indonesia, 1986-2006 (Leiden: KITLV Press 2008). <http://www.kitlv.nl/researchers-vel/>

Lily Hoo has been working with the World Bank Social Development Unit in Indonesia since 2006. A graduate from SAIS – the Johns Hopkins University, she is currently leading the Analytic Team of the Unit responsible for managing analytic works on Village Law, Frontline Service Delivery and other social development issues in Indonesia.

Logan Hamilton is an Oxford based researcher commencing his DPhil on Indonesian forest governance at Oxford University in October 2016. Logan has a Masters in Biodiversity Conservation and Management from Oxford and has worked on issues of economic sustainability and forest conservation in Malaysia and the UK.

Marieke G. H. Abelen (1962) holds a BSc in Tropical Agriculture and a MSc in Development Studies. She lived and worked in Indonesia for five years in the 1980s and '90s. She currently writes a PhD thesis on land tenure after land reallocation in Indonesia at UTwente, department ITC.

Mies Grijns has a background in anthropology. She coordinates a research project on child marriage in Indonesia at the Van Vollenhoven Institute, Leiden Law School. Based on case-studies in rural West Java the project explores the gap between international and state law and social practices of child marriage.

Muhammad Rozie Utama has a Master Degree on Public Administration from Gadjah Mada University in 2002. He has experience working at Regency and District in 1999-2000 at Province of Bengkulu-Sumatra. Join with Ministry of Home Affairs Republic of Indonesia since 2002 until now. Currently as Head of Programme and General Division at Centre for Facilitation of Cooperation, Ministry of Home Affairs Republic of Indonesia.

Nurul Firmansyah is a legal scholar who graduated from Faculty of Law of University of Andalas, Padang and obtained his Master from the same University in the study program of Integrated Natural Resources Management (INRM), with study concentration on the interaction between Islam and customs (adat) in management of natural resources based on Nagari.

Palmira Permata Bachtiar (Mia) Mia is a senior researcher at The SMERU Research Institute. She holds master's degrees in international economics and business from the University of Groningen in the Netherlands; agricultural economics from Reading University in the UK; and rural and agricultural development from the Institute of Social Studies in the Netherlands. Prior to joining SMERU, Mia worked as a researcher for the Centre for Economic and Social Studies, Jakarta.

Prio Sambodho is a PhD Candidate at the Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research. He is part of a project called “From Clients to Citizens? Emerging Citizenship in Democratising Indonesia”, a collaboration between Universitas Gadjah Mada, the University of Amsterdam, and Leiden University which is funded by the Dutch and Indonesian Governments.

Rambu Luba Kata Respati Nugrohowardhani, or Dhani Siliwolu for short, is a lecturer at The Universitas Wira Wacana Sumba in Waingapu where she has been teaching since 1997. She completed her doctoral degree at Universitas Kristen Satya Wacana and master degree at Institute of Social Studies in the field of development studies. Her research interest is rural development in Sumba, with a focus on rural economic development from the perspective of institutional economics.

Rendy Adriyan Diningrat (Rendy) Rendy is a researcher at The SMERU Research Institute. He holds a bachelor’s and master’s degree in urban and regional planning from Gadjah Mada University. Prior to joining SMERU, Rendy worked as an expert staff for the integration of urban and rural development policies in Bappenas.

Rosa de Vos is a PhD Candidate at ‘Sociology of Development and Change’, Wageningen University. She has a background in Southeast Asia Studies and International Development Studies. Her current research is about palm oil and land conflicts in West Kalimantan. She is particularly interested in local histories of land use and property relations.

Sutoro Eko Yunanto obtained his P.hD of Political Science at Gadjah Mada University in 2015. He was researcher at Institute for Research and Empowerment (1997-2012), lecturer of Governmental Studies, Sekolah Tinggi Pembangunan Masyarakat Desa “APMD” Yogyakarta (1994 – now); Chairperson of Village Reform Forum (FPPD) (2004 – now); planner/architect of Academic Paper and Village Law Draft at Ministry of Home Affairs (2007-2010); member of the expert team of Village Law, DPR (2013). Currently he is Village Governance Adviser of KOMPAK/DFAT for the Indonesian Ministry of Village (2015 – now).

Takeshi Ito is Associate Professor of Political Science at the Faculty of Liberal Arts and the Graduate School of Global Studies, Sophia University in Tokyo. His research concerns agrarian and environmental change, political economy of development, resource politics, Southeast Asia, and theories of hegemony and resistance. He is currently working on a project that critically examines the ways in which neoliberal institutionalism manifested in development practices reshapes and transforms political and social relations of the poor in Indonesia. <http://www.fl.a.sophia.ac.jp/professors/itotakeshi>

Thijs Schut is a PhD-candidate in Cultural anthropology and Asian Studies at the University of Western Australia, and currently also affiliated the University of Amsterdam. His research is concerned with the so-called troubled education-to-work transitions of educated young people in rural Indonesia, for which he has done fieldwork in the district of Ngada on the island of Flores.

Tyas Retno Wulan, lecturer in the Department of Sociology Faculty of Social and Politic General Sudirman University Indonesia since 1996. Graduated from the Department of Sociology in 1995, graduated Master of Gadjah Mada University in Sociology 2001 and finished Doctoral Degree of Rural Sociology of Bogor Agricultural Institute in 2010. Since the 2010 Become the Head of the Center of Research for Gender, Children, and

Community Service LPPM Jendral Sudirman University of Indonesia; Advisor of "SERUNI" Migrant Workers Association Banyumas Jawa Tengah;

Walter T. de Vries is Chair of Land Management at the Technical University of Munich, director of Land Management and Land Tenure programs, and member of the Bayern Academy of Rural Space. His research interests include smart and responsible land management, urban and rural development and capacity development for land policy.

Ward Berenschot is a post-doc researcher at KITLV, specializing in identity politics and local democracy in India and Indonesia. He is the author of Riot Politics: Hindu-Muslim Violence and the Indian State (Hurst/Colombia University Press 2011) as well as several articles and on ethnic violence, local governance and legal aid. He is currently working on a book project on patronage democracy in Indonesia.

Wasisto Raharjo Jati is political scientist and researcher at the Research Center for Politics of LIPI (the Indonesian Institute of Science) in Jakarta. His research includes: 1) Assessment of Voting Behavior in Indonesian Presidential Election 2014 (2014); 2) Nationalism in Borderlands: Identifying of Nationalism Factors among Society in Indonesia - Malaysia border (2014); 3) Nationalism in Contemporary Globalization Era: Identifying of Sovereignty, Religiosity, and Local Revivalism (2015 - 2019); 4) Strategy of Building Social Resilience: Mapping Social Resilience in Both Urban and Rural Areas (2015 - 2017).

Willem van der Muur is a PhD researcher at the Van Vollenhoven Institute, Leiden Law School, Leiden. He participates in the KITLV Joint Research Programme 'From Clients to Citizens? Emerging citizenship in democratizing Indonesia.' His research project is called 'Securing land rights: Land conflicts in democratizing Indonesia.'
<http://law.leiden.edu/organisation/metajuridica/vvi/staff/muur-willem-van-der.html>

Yando Zakaria (R.Yando Zakaria) Yando R. Zakaria is an anthropologist from Yogyakarta; fellow at the Circle for Village and Agrarian Reform (KARSA) in Yogyakarta; visiting lecturer at Politics and Public Administration at the Department of FISIPOL UGM. He was a member of the expert team for drafting the 2014 Village Law. From October-December 2015 he was visiting research fellow at KITLV.

Yulia (Indri) Sari is a third year PhD candidate at the Crawford School of Public Policy. She previously worked at AKATIGA Foundation, a research based advocacy NGO in Bandung Indonesia and Internal Relations Dept, Parahyangan University.

Yulia Sri Sukapti, "Sri". After a decade in economic and business studies Sri has joined The Institute for ECOSOC Rights as a researcher. She assists with project design for programs for local communities, especially in Central Kalimantan. It is a civil society organisation based in Indonesia dedicated to promote the economic, social and cultural (ecosoc) rights for the marginalized people and public accountability of businesses performance that affects people's life, chiefly through researches and public education in Indonesia.